War Taxes — Will Be Due This Year

Demand Sliding Tax for Unemployment

Rearrangement and the vast new federal tax schedule to pay for it, which will be extended against companies and individuals this tax year, make it imperative that we adjust domestic taxes as far as possible to meet the foreign emergency. The biggest single burden every business house has to pay is the 3% tax on its payroll for unemployment insurance, which, although enacted under a promise to graduate the tax downward for good employment records, remains at a flat 3% regardless of the record.

The Alabama legislature has just adopted a memorial to congress demanding that federal Social Security legislation be amended to enforce a sliding scale tax for unemployment.

There is no point in arguing, here,

that this proposal will save anybody any money—the real point is that the total tax burden to be paid at the close of the year on this year's business will be vastly increased, and we should set our domestic house in order so that the greatest possible amount of money can be spent on national defense.

How great will the per capita tax increase be?

Well, the present United States budget of $42 billion dollars, distributed among 132 million people, amounts to $64 per capita.

But Great Britain this year is paying $232 per capita, and France $200—

which is a likely hint as to the heights our $64-per-capita may jump to.

There never has been any dispute over the Old Age Insurance division of Social Security. It is simply a compulsory insurance program, in which employer and employee are taxed equally. And its rates and benefits are easily determined, for payment is made on one of two conditions, both of which are very definite matters—death, or reaching the age of 65.

But unemployment insurance is an entirely different matter, with newspapers, stores and other regular-employment business houses dumped in to the same pool with all industry.

There is no semblance of an insurance program at all in the present unemployment setup under Social Security.

For it is obvious to everyone that when you go to take out an insurance policy the rate varies between individual policyholders.

If it is life insurance, an office clerk pays one rate—but a man working in a powder factory, or flying an airplane, pays a higher rate.

Or, if it is fire insurance, an office building pays one rate—but an oil warehouse pays quite a different one.

The Star has steadfastly supported all social welfare legislation—but no steps are being taken, apparently, to carry out the insurance feature originally pledged in the unemployment division of Social Security.

It will be up to candidates for the legislature to tell the people whether they are going to pledge Arkansas to follow Alabama in demanding enforcement of the original federal law.

Adoption of a merit-rating program, and a sliding scale tax for unemployment, were urged unanimously

by the Arkansas Press association this month, and will be similarly supported by the rank-and-file of business houses who are paying most of the tax and whose employees receive little or no benefit.

Either the unemployment law will be turned into the true insurance program that was promised, or the law will face a demand for its outright repeal.

Sid Bowden, 45, Is Killed; Chas. Duke Held for Murder

No Murder Motive —
Duke, Despondent, Turns Gun on Self

INQUEST WAIVED

Duke Placed in County Jail Here Following
Shooting

Sid Bowden, 45, formerly of Texarkana was shot and killed Tuesday night at the farm of Freeman Crider, with whom he had been living for the past few weeks, about eight miles north of Hope near DeAnn community.

Sheriff Baker announced that Charles Duke, 66, a distant relative and living in the same house with Crider and Bowden, was jailed on a charge of first degree murder and will probably be given a hearing Monday.

Dr. J. A. Weaver, coroner stated that no inquest would be necessary.

Story of Shooting

Witnesses reported that Bowden was cleaning a squirrel back of the house when Duke walked to the door and said, "Sid, I am going to kill you," and immediately started shooting. The first of several shots hit Bowden under the right arm and passed completely through his body. He ran about 20 steps, fell and died.

Duke then tried to shoot himself in the head but his daughter knocked the .22 rifle from his hand; his son, Clifton, took a pocket-knife from him when he tried to cut himself, witnesses told Sheriff Baker.

The sheriff arrived on the scene about 8:30 and brought the body to Hope. It was later removed to Texarkana where a brother of Bowden owns a funeral home.

Reported Despondent

Duke told officers that he "didn't know what made me do it." His family could think of no motive except that he had been depressed over crop conditions for the past few days.

Sheriff Baker told The Star that he was called to the same house in 1932 when a negro woman was killed by a negro man.

Bowden was not married, and immediate survivors could not be learned Wednesday.

Congress Agreed on

WASHINGTON —(AP)—The State Department has instructed its representatives in Berlin and Rome to notify the German and Italian governments of the United States' opposition to the transfer of any Western hemisphere possession from one non-American power to another.

ROME —(AP)—A source usually reliable said Wednesday the United States government, invoking the Monroe doctrine, had warned Italy it wouldn't countenance any German or Italian interference with French or British possessions in the Western hemisphere.

It was said a statement of the American position was handed Italian authorities Tuesday by Ambassador William Phillips.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Congress warned the world Tuesday that the United States would fight to uphold the Monroe Doctrine.

By a vote of 382 to 8, the house passed a resolution, already approved by the senate, declaring this country would not "acquiesce" in the transfer of territory in the Western Hemisphere from one non-American nation to another.

Sleuthing Against Spies by Private Citizens Discouraged

Evidence Should Be Given Direct to FBI, 500
Rector Building, Little Rock

'Any evidence of espionage or "Fifth Column" activities, secured by private citizens, should be referred direct to the nearest Federal Bureau of Investigation representative," said J. J. Harrison, State Director for the Office of Government Reports, in a statement made Wednesday.

Mr. Harrison pointed out that the Department of Justice had instructed all Federal law enforcement agencies to discourage individuals or groups, without official status or responsibility, from engaging in activities of an investigative nature. Under these instructions evidence of subversive activities obtained even by United States Marshal and other Federal officials as well as that secured by private citizens should be turned over to the F. B. I. In event a violation of a Federal law has been committed, the United States Attorney will then take action.

This policy has been adopted by the Department of Justice at the request of the President to prevent confusion, to increase efficiency and to secure the rights and civil liberties of individuals. The memorandum of the President to the Attorney General states:

"This task must be conducted in a comprehensive and effective manner on a national basis, and all information must be carefully sifted out and correlated in order to avoid confusion and responsibility.

"To this end I request all police officers, sheriffs and all other law enforcement officers in the United States promptly to turn over to the nearest representative of the Federal Bureau of Investigation any information obtained by them relating to espionage, counter-espionage, sabotage, subversive activities, and violations of the neutrality laws."

The office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Arkansas is located at 500 Rector Building, Little Rock, Arkansas.

Mr. Cox used as his subject "Duty and Co-operation of Citizens to the Government." He denounced un-American activities in the United States and stated it was the duty of citizens to report such activities to the proper authorities.

"The world today," he concluded, "is at its lowest ebb. We must not get panicky, but people must be made to realize the seriousness of the present situation. SERIAL STORY

Ticket to Hollywood

BY W. H. PEARS

Copyright 1940 NEA Service, Inc.

YESTERDAY! Both Gusti and Francie claim the ticket and Francie is furious when Gusti appropriates it. She rushes home, tells her father and Aunt about the affair. Aunt Hat has her own ideas about how to get the ticket and how to get to Hollywood.

CHAPTER III

BY purely an accident Francie reached the short-cut at the same moment as Gusti. An accident, however, that involved precise timing and a knowledge of his habits. Gusti wore a suit of greasy khaki dungarees and a tiny felt skullcap perched on his black hair.

"Hi-yah, Sugar," he bellowed. Francie jumped like a startled fawn. "Oh, it's you, Gusti!"

"In person."

Francie drew a circle on the sidewalk with her toeless pump. "Aunt Hat discovered we were out of coffee and—"

"Fancy meeting me here, huh?" Gusti said. "Some girls get all the breaks."

She mustered a very decent blush. "I'm glad, though, Gusti. I... well, last night..."

"You acted pretty corny."

"I—I know, Gusti, but it all happened so fast. I hardly knew what I was saying."

He shoved the skullcap back on his head, squinted. "You're a funny girl, Francie."

"Am I?"

"Never mind," Gusti said, taking her arm. "I'm bighearted. I'll walk home with you."

They talked swing as they went. Gusti was playing a job that night. He'd worked out some new "licks" that would startle the world of music.

Francie didn't mention the ticket. At 17, under Aunt Hat's tutelage, she was beginning to acquire a "feel" for masculine behavior. Something told her that this was no time to attack. Gusti's mind was full of music. For allies she needed moonlight, solitude and her loveliest frock.

Arriving at the Weston's front porch, Francie said, "Gee, Gusti, I'd like to hear those swell licks."

"Would you?" he asked, surprised. "I thought you weren't going to speak to me again."

"That was last night, Gusti. Girls change their minds."

"And how! Well, all right, I'll pick you up around 8."

"I'll be waiting," Francie lifted.

NEVER in her life had Francie taken such care in dressing. Aunt Hat, hovering in the background, "poured" out a steady stream of advice. It seemed odd to Francie to be doing all this for Gusti, who never noticed what she wore. But tonight she just had to make an impression.

Why, maybe her whole future depended on it! No doubt existed in her mind that once she sang from Hollywood her career was assured. And, she reflected with a magnanimous glow, she'd see that Gusti got his chance, too. This thought made her feel a little less guilty about using her wiles on him.

She put on the new blue dress which somehow, matured, her slender figure. She fussed with her hair, until it resembled a sheet of smooth golden syrup. Presently Aunt Hat bustled in with a bottle of French perfume. She touched the glass stopper to Francie's hair and ears. Francie prayed that the generous amount of rouge and lipstick she used would escape Pops' keen eyes.

But he only gazed at her in quiet admiration and said, "Be home by midnight." And then as she went out on the porch, "Poor Gusti..."

Duke Meyer's Kampus Wildcats played that night under a severe handicap. No swing. The guests were practically aged, and at 11 the party broke up.

Gusti's old roadster was at the curb. The impression it gave was one of general debility, yet many of the town's speed merchants had learned from experience to respect it. Gusti kept the motor running "smooth as a ribbon." He climbed in without opening the door, letting Francie help herself. "I'll go stale playing jobs like this. If I could get to Hollywood on 50 bucks, would I use that old ticket!"

Francie bit off an angry retort. "Whoodle," Aunt Hat had cautioned. Gusti headed toward Francie's street.

"Let's not go home yet," Francie pleaded. "It's so nice out and there's such a lovely moon."

Gusti grunted ungraciously, but turned at the airport road. When they reached the field, Francie said, "Let's stop and watch the midnight plane come in..."

oh, not here. Drive up where we can be to ourselves."

GUSTI parked. Francie leaned back and gazed up at a big white moon. She managed rather unobtrusively to ease herself a little closer to Gusti—close enough, in fact, so that she was sure the French perfume wouldn't be wasted.

Nor was it. Gusti bent, took the bait in great whiffs. "Gee, you smell good, Francie. Why doncha always put that stuff on?"

She said demurely, "I didn't know you liked it."

"Well, I do."

"Huh?"

"Do you like me?"

"Well, for Pete's sake!" Gusti exploded. "Who'd you think you are—a glimmer girl?"

Francie winced but plunged on valiantly. "I like you, Gusti. Don't be a wise-cracker... just for a little bit."

Gusti turned away from her a moment. She could see the tight line of his jaw in the moonlight. Without actually being aware of it, Francie sensed the struggle going on within him. As if he wanted to be nice to her and was afraid to—or didn't know how.

"You're a pretty fair sort of kid," he said finally.

"Is that all, Gusti?"

He dropped his arm across her shoulders. "Nope, I guess not. I guess I like you pretty well." His young voice was rough, a little husky.

Francie gasped. For Gusti this was a daring admission. Love was for saps, he always contended. He liked Francie only because she knew good swing.

"Why, Gusti," She burrowed under his arm, laid her face against his coat. They sat like that a long time, without speaking.

Once Francie thought she felt Gusti's lips brush lightly over her hair. She sighed. It was so perfect. Gusti could be silent and tender.

Presently he said, "I—I'm acting like a sap."

"You're not, Gusti."

"You know something, Francie? I'm kinda in the dumps over those licks. I never knew it was so nice just to sit with a girl and not say anything. It makes a fellow feel a lot better."

REMORE pressed down upon Francie. If only Gusti would act like this all the time she might even forget her career. She gazed longingly at the little gold trumpet pinned to his shirt. Gusti had won it in a state-wide musical competition. It was his most beloved possession.

Francie spoke softly, prying the words from her reluctant tongue: "Gusti, if I asked you now, would you give me the ticket?"

He stiffened. "What for?"

"Pops may drive us to Hollywood." She tugged at his sleeve. "Please, Gusti..."

"Well, I'll be!" Gusti's laugh shattered the peaceful silence horribly. "So that's why you're so nice to me tonight?" Just for an instant the moonlight caught the hurt in his face. "Nothing doing."

"But—but you can't use it."

"Oh, no? Maybe I will and maybe I won't. But it's a cinch I wouldn't give it to you. Playing me for a sap!"

Gusti wheeled the car around and sped back to town. He jammed to a stop in front of Francie's house and said gruffly, "Well, so long; see you in the movies."

Francie turned a pale face to him. Her voice quivered, "You're selfish, and I hate you!"

Anti-Chain Store Tax Is Thrown Out

Patman Bill Killed by Subcommittee of House

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A house ways and means subcommittee tabled the Patman chain store tax bill Tuesday.

Chairman McCormack (Dem. Mass.), said the subcommittee rejected a motion in executive session to report the bill favorably and then voted to adjourn sine die. This, he said, precluded further consideration at this session.

The committee action came after weeks of hearings on the legislation, which would impose a tax ranging from $5 to $1,000 on chains of 10 or more retail stores. On large chains the total levy would have run into many thousands of dollars.

McCormack said "there was a feeling among members of the subcommittee that if legislation along such lines was considered necessary by reason of any fear of the threat of monopoly as advanced by its proponents, that such legislation should be of a regulatory nature and not punitive through exercise of the taxing power. Such legislation would not be within the jurisdiction of this committee."

negotiations were resumed, and in the end there was an agreement: Smith would drop some amendments which the A. F. of L. leaders just couldn't swallow, and would put in the ones the A. F. of L. especially wanted—and in return the A. F. of L. would support the rest of his amendments.

Surprise for Mrs. Norton

This left Mrs. Norton high, dry and nowhere. She thought the A. F. of L. was back of her, and not until the debate was in full swing did she find it on the firing line opposing her. The result was a rout, with the Smith-A. F. of L. amendments passing by a huge majority.

However... the House-approved bill goes much farther than the A. F. of L. really wants. Current issue of the A. F. of L. weekly news letter admits as much and says that "the federation will now strive to have the senate eliminate certain features of the bill which are considered objectionable."

Chances are pretty good that the federation can do this. If it succeeds, the bill that will finally become law will be just about what the original Norton amendments provided for, five men on the board instead of three, provisions to protect craft unions from being swamped and drowned in waves of industrial unionism, and giving employers the right to petition for an election when there is doubt as to who represents whom.

Amendment Disowned

The C. I. O. saw it just the way the A. F. of L. did, and began to put the heat on. It did this so effectively that Mrs. Norton presently disowned her own amendments.

About this time Congressman Howard Smith of Virginia got busy on his own hook. He went to President Green of the A. F. of L. to see if they couldn't work out a deal. They had a number of talks, got nowhere, and finally broke off negotiations.

Then a fellow-member of Smith's investigating committee, Congressman Routhorn of Ohio, came to the rescue. Through him, the broken ne-

Today's War Was Forecast in 1893

Maj. J. D. Fullerton Predicted Aerial Warfare

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — In the days of glorifying the major and minor prophets of modern warfare, let me how low to Rep. Carl Hinshaw, of Pasadena, Calif., for digging up Maj. J. D. Fullerton, of the British Royal Engineers.

On file at the war department is a complete record of a speech Major Fullerton made at the International Congress of Engineers in August, 1893. That, mind you, was ten years before the Wright boys took their first flying machine off the sands of Kitty Hawk. Only the ritziest of ritzies had electric lights. Gasoline bugles were practically unknown and the greatest pedestrian menace was the bicycle.

Listen! Major Fullerton speaking: "To sum up: First, it seems quite probable that in the near future, aerial warfare will have to be counted upon."

"Second, this will, practically speaking, revolutionize the art of war. "Third, owing to the high rate of speed which airships will attain, it will be necessary for all nations to maintain themselves, ready for war at any short notice."

"Fourth, the nations most affected by the introduction of aerial warfare will be those who depend for their defense upon navies."

"Fifth, as the aerial ships will be, comparatively speaking, inexpensive, the small nations will be able to equip themselves with them."

"Sixth, owing to the possibility of war at very short notice, a larger proportion of the nation will have to be kept under arms."

"Seventh, wars by sea and land will only be possible when a nation has command of the air."

If that's not hitting the fuselage on the nose, I never heard of it. Like Mr. Hinshaw, it's hard to keep from wondering—if that sort of conviction has been floating around in military circles for 47 years—where the arm strategists of our and other nations have been. And how come it was left to A. Hitler, Goering & Co. to prove the British major's points?

HARRISON IN HOLLYWOOD

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Correspondent

Bulletins from the movie zone. BURBANK—The Warner high command admitted late today that bombing planes, being tested before delivery to an unnamed power, seriously disrupted troop concentrations on three outdoor sets. Although the planes came from the direction of the Union Air Terminal it was hinted that they may have been manned by RKO saboteurs. Although there were no casualties, a pair of binoculars fell near Brenda Marshall, who was taking a sun bath on the roof of the dressing room building.

UNIVERSAL CITY—A terrible new instrument of destruction is nearing completion in the Universal laboratories and will be tested in a forthcoming Boris Karloff picture, it was guardedly revealed today by nine press agents. "If my Q-ray is effective against actors, I will try it on some of the critics," declared Ogre-in-Chief Karloff.

GLENDALE—Vigilant guards at the Walt Disney plant are believed to have thwarted an assassination today when they seized and searched one of the "tourists" who have been filtering into this area. Found to be carrying a piece of cheese and a mouse trap, the man is said to have confessed that he was an agent for a rival cartoon company.

HOLLYWOOD—A report that Paramount has captured Jean Arthur in a talent raid is branded as "absurd" in the latest communication from a Columbia. It also is denied that Cary Grant has been rushed to the cutting room after blowing up in his lines. The summary continues: "Steady shooting continues on all stages. Twelve hostile planes were destroyed in the miniature department this morning. The 'Arizona' company under the command of Wally Ruggles has fulfilled its mission and will be evacuated from the Phoenix sector this week."

CULVER CITY—A authorized spokesman for the major studios said in a back-to-the-wall statement today that "if this industry is to prevail, we must have help from America. Most of all, we need customers. We also can use modern, high-powered scenarios, lightly armored oomph girls and lots of scrap metal to be cast into Academy statuettes."

BEVERLY HILLS—According to an admiralty report, the American tanker John Barrymore came into port under its own power today after striking a submerged mine in a Martini last night and being grounded on a bar. Camouflage experts are repainting the superstructure.

LOS ANGELES—Excitement rocked the cinema capital today when (two words deleted by Hays office) appeared in divorce court and exhibited a (three words deleted by Hays office) which the actress declared (eight words deleted by Hays office). Defense counsel submitted evidence that the wealthy producer merely had been waiting for a street car and said the allegations were part of a Fifth Column plot to discredit the motion picture business.

WESTWOOD—Darryl F. Zanuck, celluloid Napoleon of 20th Century-Fox today tightened his reins of dictatorship by assuming the portfolio of Yes-Men along with his other powers. Operations will be expedited, it was pointed out, now that Zanuck can approve his own decisions. Along with the former Minister of Affirmation some 400 persons have been summarily removed from Zanuck's cabinet in a counter-attack against extravagance. He said: "We expect to be out of the retrenchments by Christmas."

No Bad Treatment Of War Prisoners

AP Feature Service

GENEVA, Switzerland.—(AP)—International Red Cross officials, just back from an inspection of prison camps in Great Britain, France and Germany, say they found no cases of ill treatment and no violations of any international law governing war prisoners.

Germany, according to neutral sources in Switzerland, could swap 10 French-British prisoners for every German held by the Allies and still have tens of thousands left. These sources estimate that Germany's total advantage in prisoners, including Belgians and Dutch, is close to 50 to 1. Germany still has approximately 250,000 Polish prisoners, many of whom have been put into labor battalions.

The International Red Cross prisoners' bureau, an all-Swiss organization which coordinates the work of national societies, so far as handled 587,000 letters between prisoners and their relatives and 220,000 other communications. Thousands of prisoners were exchanged through the Red Cross during the last war, but so far only a few interned civilians have passed through Switzerland in this war.

The first sterilization law in the United States was passed in Indiana in 1907; the first European law was passed in 1928 in the Swiss Canton de Vaud. Approximately 28 states of the Union now have laws providing for the compulsory or voluntary sterilization of mentally deficient persons.

JOBS for JUNE GRADUATES

By DR. FLOYD W. REEVES
 Director, American Youth Commission

Five Major Steps to Keep in Mind in Career Planning

American youth leaving schools and colleges to seek jobs faces a highly competitive labor market. It would be both unfair and unrealistic to say that all who desire work, and have the energy to seek it, can find jobs. The fact is there are not enough jobs to go around.

It takes about two years for the average boy or girl to find employment that carries with it any degree of permanence. This does not mean that most young people walk the streets for two years before obtaining their first job. It does mean that there is an enormous turnover among new workers before they find the job for which they are suited.

On a national average, one in six will be unable to find employment, and will help to swell the estimated total of 4,000,000 unemployed young people under 24 years of age, which today represents about one-third of the nation's unemployment problem.

After painting this gloomy picture, there are a number of helpful suggestions based on studies and findings of the American Youth Commission, which can be of value to the boy or girl in search of work.

The first suggestion is offered more to parents than to young people, for the search for a job starts from the home. Parents should realize that the aptitudes and interests of a son or daughter may be quite different from their own, and they should not be dictatorial about occupational choice.

They should encourage vocational exploration, but should discourage wishful thinking. Most boys aspire to white collar jobs, although 70 per cent are destined to wear overalls.

Second, a boy or girl should seek vocational guidance from those qualified to give it. If they are fortunate, their school has a guidance program.

Even if an individual's school does not offer guidance, it will be wise to ask the school principal or class teacher what he believes he or she is best fitted to undertake. In the search for counsel it will also pay to make inquiries at the local Y. M. C. A. or Y. W. C. A., for many branches offer occupational guidance for youth out of school.

Third, most young persons fail to register at the local public placement agency. Creation of a network of public employment offices is one of the great social achievements of recent years, which recognizes the public's responsibility for helping bring workers and employers together.

Fourth, boys and girls unable to find employment should consider additional education. This is not always possible, but the more education one has, the better the chances are of getting a job.

Fifth, if circumstances make it impossible for a youth to continue his education without assistance, he may be eligible for the Civilian Conservation Corps or for a National Youth Administration scholarship or work project.

To know what one can do and the fields in which there are the greatest opportunities is half the battle. It gives a sense of direction, and permits a boy or girl to act with purpose. Above all, it prevents aimless drift, which is demoralizing to character.

Committee Okehs 'Largest Navy' Bill

House Group Moves With Sensational Speed

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) said Wednesday the $4,000,000,000 naval expansion bill recommended by the house naval committee Tuesday has President Roosevelt's approval.

"The measure would merely authorize expansion, carrying no appropriation," he said.

Big Navy Speeded

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The house naval committee recommended Tuesday a $4,000,000,000 additional naval program, to give the United States the mightiest navy that ever sailed the seas. The committee, acting with unheard-of speed, it received the program from Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations this morning.

The bill, legislators said, is designed to give the nation a fleet strong enough to meet any threat from Germany, Italy and Japan, and the defend both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts at the same time.

The 200 fighting craft which would be built would include, besides battleships, cruisers, destroyers and submarines, two new types of vessels, informers sources asserted. One, it was said, would be a speedy transport capable of carrying completely equipped detachments of marines with their tanks and light aircraft. Legislators asserted the navy already was negotiating with the Maritime Commission for two and possibly three such vessels.

The other would be a heavy cruiser of, about 28,000 tons, carrying 11-inch guns and strong armor, and capable of making swift journeys to any trouble spot in the South Atlantic.

The program would take seven years to complete, and would raise the total number of ships to 738. Stark said that if congress approved the authorization legislation, he would ask $175,000,000 appropriation immediately.

The proposal was submitted as a substitute for a $1,200,000,000 naval expansion bill introduced in congress Monday by Senator Walsh, (Dem. Mass.) and Representative Vinson (Dem. Ga.), respective chairmen of the senate and house naval committees.

Russia Threatening Nazis?

LONDON —(AP)— Reuters' British news agency, reported in a dispatch from Kaunas, Lithuania, Tuesday night that German troop movements were being carried out in East Prussia.

Additional Soviet Russian troops, including motorized units, have been arriving in Lithuania for the past four days.

Several buildings in Kaunas, the Lithuanian capital, have been requisitioned for Soviet military authorities. Russia moved in on Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, her three little Baltic neighbors strategically near to East Prussia, after alleging they were engaged in a military alliance contrary to the 'mutual assistance' pacts she exacted from them last autumn.

About 500,000 Russian troops have been reported already in the three countries.

Germans Pursue French

BERLIN —(AP)— Striking on against broken France, the German military experts Tuesday night declared that "fighting can be stopped only when the armistice is signed."

"The military collapse of France is swiftly progressing under the pressure of our relentless pursuit," said the high command.

Without reference to Munich, the high command showed how the German drive in the West was going on unabated.

Big Success Claimed

These were among the recent German successes claimed:

The river Loire reached from Orleans to Nevers.

The Orne river crossed at several points between Caen on the channel coast and Le Mans.

France's great armament works at Le Creusot—her Ruhr district—seized.

The elaborate Maginot line defenses being pulled apart from all sides, after being severed Tuesday from the rest of France by a German wedge reaching to the Swiss border.

The capture of 100,000 prisoners in Tuesday's operations.

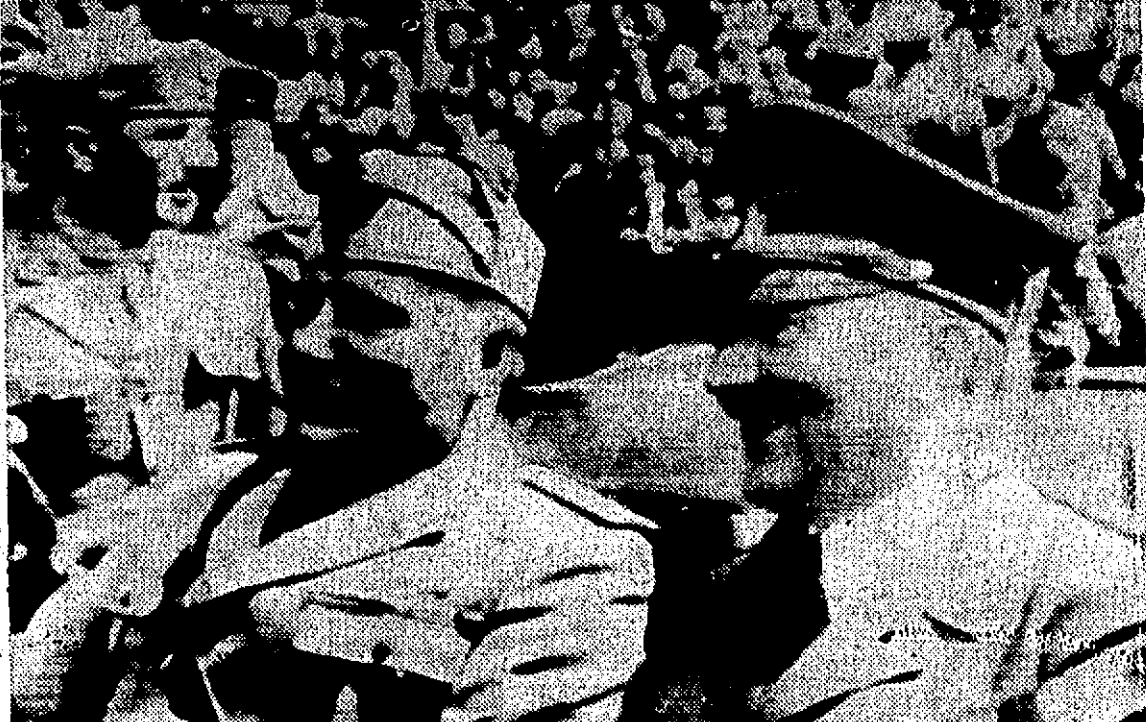

Among the war material seized at Nevers, it was said, were more than 100 tanks including six 70-tonners.

Heavy Raids on Shipping

The German air force has been busy, claiming its biggest success to date in a raid on a concentration of Allied shipping in the Loire estuary.

The high command listed nine big transports, totaling 170,000 tons, and several warships and smaller merchant men as hit. Authorized sources estimated that more than 800,000 tons were "damaged or sunk."

Alabama Would Reward Good-Record Business Houses

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(AP)— The Alabama legislature voted Tuesday to place unemployment compensation taxes on a sliding scale, with reductions going to businesses and workmen with long-time records of stabilized employment.
